Q1 2026 Fund Commentary

Commentary and opinions are provided by Keyridge Asset Management Limited.

Market commentary

Asia Pacific equity markets entered the first quarter of 2026 strongly, with solid gains in January and February before a sharp pullback in March. The quarter began with a rally led by information technology, particularly semiconductors, in markets such as South Korea and Taiwan, supported by favourable currency moves. As the quarter progressed, this momentum faded as broader global challenges, including energy price volatility and geopolitical uncertainty, weighed on risk appetite across the region.

Dispersion across markets remained a defining feature of the quarter. South Korea continued to attract investor flows and proved relatively resilient, while sentiment toward China and India was more fragile amid growth concerns and policy uncertainty. Structural themes, especially artificial intelligence (AI) and broader technology exposure, continued to support earnings expectations despite near-term volatility, with companies such as Taiwan Semiconductor Manufacturing Co. Ltd. (TSMC), Samsung Electronics Co. Ltd. and SK Hynix Inc. representing a significant share of the region's index weight.

Geopolitics also shaped market sentiment during the quarter. U.S.-China relations were broadly stable, with continued strategic competition increasingly seen as the new normal. The unexpected escalation in the Middle East contributed to energy price volatility and a rise in global risk aversion, adding to uncertainty across the region. Asia Pacific, viewed as more vulnerable to the conflict because of its reliance on oil imports, experienced additional pressure.

Performance

The financials, information technology and consumer discretionary sectors contributed to performance during the quarter.

Delta Electronics Inc. and HDFC Bank Ltd. contributed to performance.

The communication services, industrials and utilities sectors detracted from performance during the quarter.

TSMC and Samsung Electronics Co. Ltd. detracted from performance.

Portfolio activity

The sub-advisor didn't make any trades during the quarter.

Outlook

The sub-advisor's outlook for the Asia Pacific market remains cautiously positive. While near-term volatility may persist because of the uncertain global interest-rate path and ongoing geopolitical tensions, including U.S.-China relations and instability in the Middle East, the region continues to benefit from solid structural growth in technology and semiconductors, improving domestic demand and relatively attractive valuations compared with other developed markets.

The sub-advisor believes policy support in China could provide incremental upside if more decisive measures are implemented, while continued global diversification flows into Asia may offer additional support. South Korea may maintain its earnings momentum, supported by corporate governance reforms and sustained semiconductor investment. The sub-advisor continues to monitor potential risks including geopolitical developments and currency fluctuations, which could affect market performance across the region.
