Q1 2026 Fund Commentary

Commentary and opinions are provided by Fidelity Investments Canada ULC.

Market commentary

Global equities broadly declined during the first quarter of 2026. Markets shifted from expectations of interest rate cuts and earnings strength toward concerns about inflation risks, higher-for-longer rates and slowing global growth. Escalating geopolitical tensions added to inflation pressures, dampened risk appetite and reshaped expectations for global growth. The conflict in the Middle East in late February drove oil prices sharply higher and raised concerns about the potential for sustained inflationary pressures and materially slower economic growth across major developed economies. Six of eleven GICS sectors posted positive returns, led by energy, utilities and materials, while consumer discretionary and communication services lagged.

Major central banks held rates steady during the quarter. The U.S. Federal Reserve Board (Fed) acknowledged that inflation progress is expected to continue but more slowly than hoped, with energy prices expected to push up overall inflation. U.S. economic growth came in below expectations, reflecting weaker exports, household spending and business investment. In Europe, rising energy prices pushed annual inflation back above target in March.

Performance

Within the fixed income allocation, U.S. investment-grade bonds contributed to performance during the quarter. Within the equity allocation Selection in the energy and consumer staples sectors contributed to performance during the quarter. From a regional perspective, the Fund's exposure to emerging markets and the Canada also contributed to performance.

Ovintiv Inc. contributed to performance, supported by the company's portfolio repositioning, including the closing of the NuVista Energy Ltd. acquisition and the announced sale of Anadarko assets, which sharpened the company's focus on higher-return assets and debt reduction. Target Corp. contributed to performance because of investor optimism around a new multi-year growth plan and management's expectation for a return to sales growth in 2026. TotalEnergies SE contributed to performance as the company was supported by its disciplined capital allocation, resilient refining results and continued shareholder returns, including a maintained dividend

Within the equity allocation Selection in the consumer discretionary and information technology sectors detracted from performance during the quarter. From a regional perspective, the Fund's exposure to the U.S. and Europe detracted from performance.

Microsoft Corp. detracted from performance because of investor concerns about the scale of artificial intelligence-related spending and the timing of returns, despite continued strength in the company's core business. AppLovin Corp. detracted from performance because of investor concerns that artificial intelligence (AI) advances could disrupt the advertising technology sector, particularly in mobile gaming, with fears that larger platforms could improve ad targeting and compress margins. Sea Ltd. Detracted from performance after quarterly earnings fell short of expectations, reinforcing concerns that intense competition could weigh on profitability even as revenue growth remained strong.

Outlook

In equities, the sub-advisor continues to favour long-duration secular growth, with AI at the core of their thesis as companies accelerate investment across the value chain. In the sub-advisor's view, the most compelling opportunities are within infrastructure and semiconductor leaders with durable competitive advantages, while selectively adding to data centres and power-related names, where volatility has created opportunity. Connected TV remains a key theme for the sub-advisor, supported by the steady migration of advertising budgets toward digital platforms.

In fixed income, the sub-advisor believes that bond markets, while modestly weaker across some sectors, have remained relatively resilient in aggregate despite a disruptive macroeconomic backdrop. The sub-advisor notes that geopolitical developments alongside rapidly shifting Fed expectations and exceptionally heavy AI-driven corporate issuance, have contributed meaningfully to bond market volatility. Still, the sub-advisor believes that while credit spreads have drifted wider year-to-date, spreads across investment grade and high-yield markets have remained well-contained by historical standards.
