Q1 2026 Fund Commentary

Commentary and opinions are provided by Mackenzie Investments.

Market commentary

The U.S. economy started 2026 on a positive note, with consumer spending and business investment providing support through January. Sentiment shifted in late February after the outbreak of the conflict in the Middle East, and equity markets reversed sharply in March as rising oil prices raised concerns about inflation and potential economic softening.

The U.S. Federal Reserve Board held the federal funds rate steady at 3.50%–3.75% at both its January and March meetings, maintaining a pause in its rate-cutting cycle as policymakers assessed the economic impact of higher energy costs alongside a still-resilient labour market. The unemployment rate ranged between 4.3% and 4.4% throughout the quarter, ending March at 4.3%, as job gains moderated and labour force participation edged lower.

The U.S. equity market declined in the first quarter, with the S&P 500 Index falling about 4.4%. Large-capitalization technology and software stocks underperformed as investors rotated away from high-multiple growth companies amid rising inflation concerns. The energy sector was a notable exception, advancing as crude oil prices surged. Smaller-capitalization equities and the equal-weight index outperformed the market-cap-weighted benchmark as market leadership broadened beyond the largest technology names.

Performance

Security selection in the information technology, industrials and real estate sectors contributed to the Fund's performance during the first quarter of 2026. The sub-advisor's stock selection approach and a smaller-capitalization bias also contributed to performance.

Teradyne Inc. contributed to performance. The company benefited from continued strength in AI-related semiconductor demand. Ovintiv Inc. also contributed to performance, advancing with higher oil prices. Not owning Tesla Inc. contributed to performance as the stock declined during the quarter.

Security selection in the energy, consumer staples and utilities sectors detracted from performance.

Not owning Exxon Mobil Corp. and Chevron Corp. detracted from performance as energy stocks advanced during the quarter. Not owning Costco Wholesale Corp. also detracted from performance.

Portfolio activity

The sub-advisor's portfolio activity during the quarter was driven by its disciplined stock selection, optimization and daily vetting processes.
