Q1 2026 Fund Commentary

Commentary and opinions are provided by CGOV Asset Management.

Market commentary

Canadian equities posted a positive first quarter, although March was the first negative month since April 2025. The commodity rally that began in late 2025 continued, with the materials and energy sectors driving returns through January and February. Conflict in the Middle East at the end of February pushed energy stocks sharply higher and weighed on most other sectors. The energy sector gained roughly 30% during the quarter, while the utilities sector gained roughly 11%. The information technology sector fell roughly 22% and the health care sector declined roughly 4%.

Investors continued to sort through artificial intelligence (AI) winners and losers during the quarter. Gold sold off, which raised questions about its traditional safe-haven status. Market dispersion remained elevated, with a wide gap between the strongest- and weakest-performing sectors.

Performance

Security selection within the consumer discretionary and communication services sectors contributed to performance during the quarter.

Quebecor Inc. contributed to performance because of strong brand loyalty in Quebec, national expansion progress and a solid balance sheet. The sub-advisor notes that the company outperformed larger competitors during the quarter. Toromont Industries Ltd. contributed to performance because of its position as a leading Caterpillar equipment dealer in eastern Canada, an uptick in the mining segment and broader opportunities in data centre, energy storage and infrastructure spending.

Security selection within the information technology sector and a lack of exposure to the energy sector detracted from performance during the quarter.

Constellation Software Inc. detracted from performance. The company held its first earnings call in roughly a decade under new CEO Mark Miller, launched the Performance Enhancement and Monitoring (PEM) program and announced the acquisition of a 12.7% stake in Sabre Corp. The sub-advisor doesn't believe AI poses a material disruption risk to the company's vertical market software businesses. CGI Inc. detracted from performance because of its decentralized operating model and negative sentiment around AI's impact on information technology services. The sub-advisor noted that the company generates strong free cash flow, and its fixed-price contracts may benefit from AI efficiencies. Proprietary intellectual property represents roughly 21% of revenue.

Portfolio activity

The sub-advisor added Alimentation Couche-Tard Inc. during the quarter. Alimentation Couche-Tard is a global leader in the convenience and fuel retail industry, with a strong track record of disciplined acquisitions and operational improvements. The sub-advisor believes the company may benefit from its scale advantages, consistent cash flow generation and ability to reinvest capital at attractive returns across its global network of convenience store and fuel retail locations.

Outlook

The sub-advisor continues to focus on high-quality businesses trading at a discount to the sub-advisor's estimate of intrinsic value. In the sub-advisor's view, the Fund's portfolio of quality businesses purchased at reasonable valuations may provide resilience through periods of market volatility and uncertainty.
